Jim Funk
Senior Vice President of Product Management
Roku, Inc.

Jim Funk has worked in the technology industry for more than 25 years, focusing on the intersection of media and technology at companies including Apple Computer, Macromedia (now part of Adobe Systems), Netflix, and now Roku.

In 2003, he co-founded Akimbo Systems, which created the first consumer set-top box to deliver internet video directly to the TV. In 2008, he joined Netflix as Vice President of Business Development to lead its efforts to enable Netflix Instant Watching, an Internet streaming movie and TV service, on set-top boxes, game consoles, Blu-ray players, and connected TV's.

Jim joined Roku in September 2008 as Vice President of Business Development, and assumed responsibility for building the content offering on the Roku platform. He led the introduction of the industry's first open platform for television applications, growing the selection of content offerings on Roku to over five hundred choices, including partnerships with News Corporation, NBC Universal, The Walt Disney Company, CBS Interactive, HBO, Major League Baseball, the NBA, and the NHL. He is now Senior Vice President of Product Management, responsible for Roku's overall product strategy.

He holds a BA degree in Economics from Stanford University and an MBA from the Stanford Graduate School of Business.
